HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE MAHIDOL OF SONGKLA

---

Born on January 1, 1892, to Their Majesties King Chulalongkorn (Rama V) and Queen Savang Vadhana of Thailand, His Royal Highness Prince Mahidol of Songkla was educated in his early days in the Thai Court and then went to England and Germany before graduating as a naval officer and joining the Royal Thai Navy where he first developed a keen interest in nutritional problems among the crew and the low standards of public health in the country in general.

Imbued by the spirit of self sacrifice and dedication to people's welfare, His Royal Highness decided to resign his commission in the Royal Thai Navy and turned whole-heartedly to the study of Medicine and Public Health which he undertook with great diligence and perseverance at Harvard University, culminating in his receiving the Certificate in Public Health and degree of Doctor of Medicine (cum laude) from that prestigious institution in 1921 and 1928 respectively.

His Royal Highness' interest in medicine not only resulted in his excellent formal training in the profession but also stimulated him to devote himself ceaselessly to the promotion of medical education in Thailand in general. He first started scholarship programmes for promising Thai students to study basic sciences, medicine and public health abroad, especially in the U.S. subsequently, while still studying at Harvard, he succeeded in convincing the Rockefeller Foundation to agree to help the Thai Government in financing the development and modernization of medical and nursing education in Thailand. To these noble and praiseworthy efforts, His Royal Highness devoted himself fully and even to the extent of generously supplementing the Rockefeller and government funding with his own private funds.

His Royal Highness' own personal and physical involvement in the promotion of medical education took the form of a teaching assignment, upon his return from Harvard, at Siriraj Medical School in Bangkok interspersed with a stint as house physician at McCormick Hospital run by Presbyterian missionaries in the northern city of Chiangmai. He also managed to find time, throughout his busy schedule as a teaching and practising doctor, to take up an appointment as Director-General of University Affairs and to teach Basic Sciences as foundation courses for Medicine at Chulalongkorn University, then the only university in the whole kingdom.

At the time of his untimely demise at the early age of only 37 in 1929, His Royal Highness Prince Mahidol of Songkla had indeed laid a firm foundation for modern medical and public health education in Thailand.

From those early days of modern medicine in Thailand which was virtually in the capable hands of His Royal Highness to present-day Thailand where medical education and services compare favourably with any fast-developing modern society, the Thai people have always recognized and appreciated the most valuable contributions graciously made by His Royal Highness Prince Mahidol of Songkla. He has been greatly respected, admired and revered by successive generations of his countrymen for his humanist initiatives, personal sacrifices, unwavering determination and total commitment to the improvement of the quality of life and the general well-being of the Thai people. He has indeed been, is and will ever be Thailand's father of modern medicine and public health.

Prince Mahidol Award Invitation for Nomination

Prince Mahidol Award (PMA) is an international award for outstanding achievements in medicine and public health. It was founded by the Royal permission of His Majesty the King Rama IX of Thailand in memory of the 100th Anniversary of the birth of Prince Mahidol, who has been widely respected as the Father of modern medicine and public health of Thailand. Prince Mahidol's renownedly quoted encouragement to health workers is "True success is not in the learning but in its application to the benefit of mankind".

PMA is given annually to person, teams or organizations worldwide for outstanding contributions to the scientific discoveries that have extensive medical and public health applications that benefit human kind around the world. Since inception in 1992, more than 70 prizes have been awarded. Some of our laureates eventually received the Nobel Prize in medicine. However, a number of important discoveries such as the oral rehydration therapy and some key vaccines which have improved global health have been awarded prestigiously by PMA.

Nomination of scientific discoveries that have the most significant impact to medicine or public health is truly an important task. Therefore, the Scientific Advisory Committee wishes to improve the number and quality of candidates and areas for the award. The nominations from our PMA laureates, world renowned institutions, international agencies, medical and public health experts as well as other relevant figures are deemed extremely valuable. The medical and public health communities around the world would be very much obliged and thankful if you can suggest quality candidates to the list of nominees.
